Subject: Current Placement Needs for RTC Level of Care

Please see the response below regarding placement needs for children, adolescents and young adults who meet the level of care for residential treatment including those with serious behavioral and mental health challenges. We have indicated our evidence of the types of services needed and the reason(s) these services are needed for Maryland residents:

✓ if applicable	RTC Mental Health Services Needed	Estimated Annual Need * that exceeds current level of need	Reasons (use corresponding numbers of all applicable reasons listed below)
✓	For seriously emotionally disturbed adolescent females	10	2
✓	For seriously emotionally disturbed adolescent males	10	2
	For male sex offenders
✓	For developmentally delayed adolescent males with a serious psychiatric condition	5	1
✓	For developmentally delayed adolescent females with a serious psychiatric condition	5	1
✓	For adolescents with co-occurring behavioral and autistic spectrum disorders	10	2
✓	For children younger than 12 with serious emotional problems	5	2
✓	For older youth 18-21	5	1
✓	For children and youth in need of pre-placement assessment and diagnostic evaluation	15	2

Reason #	Reasons Additional Services Are Needed
1	The services are simply not available
2	There exists an extraordinarily long waiting list for these services
3	Patients have to travel for very long distances to receive these services which creates a tremendous hardship on family and others wishing to be involved in treatment
4	The services that are available are not effective, or I have concerns about the safety of patients receiving care in those available treatment locations
5	Other:

Additional comments (i.e., any clarification, detail, any specific staffing types or ratios required, programming required, etc.)

There are limited resources and beds in the state. No RTC in state to serve 18-21 and only one RTC/diagnostic serving under 12. No RTC serves youth under 70 IQ.

Additional comments (i.e., any clarification, detail, any specific staffing types or ratios required, programming required, etc.)

Howard County Department of Social Services is a relatively small agency with an average annual census of <60 children and youth in Out-of-Home placement. Of these children and youth, less than 20% would be recommended or require RTC level of care. Inclusion of a range of assessments would be beneficial beyond the routine psychiatric and psychosocial to include options for psychological testing and psychosexual evaluations by skilled clinicians in this area of specialty practice.

A program offering a range of treatment options such as short-term diagnostic services, RTC based residential & educational services, RTC based residential with community-based public education, and flexible partial RTC placement with partial home-based or community based care would be ideal.

Please see the response below regarding placement needs for children, adolescents and young adults who meet the level of care for residential treatment including those with serious behavioral and mental health challenges. We have indicated our evidence of the types of services needed and the reason(s) these services are needed for Maryland residents:

✓ if applicable	RTC Mental Health Services Needed	Estimated Annual Need	Reasons (use corresponding numbers of all applicable reasons listed below)
X	For seriously emotionally disturbed adolescent females	6	(#1 & #2) This population is often times not accepted to the current in-state RTC placements
X	For seriously emotionally disturbed adolescent males		(#2) There is already a male only placement but I had 1 male this year not accepted due to behaviors.
	For male sex offenders		Unknown due to DJS involvement on these cases.
	For developmentally delayed adolescent males with a serious psychiatric condition		Unknown
	For developmentally delayed adolescent females with a serious psychiatric condition		Unknown
X	For adolescents with co-occurring behavioral and autistic spectrum disorders	3	(#1) There appears to be a gap in services available to individuals with autistic spectrum disorders.
	For children younger than 12 with serious emotional problems
X	For older youth 18-21	3	(#1) Once a youth turns 18 y.o in the state it is very difficult to find RTC placement. If the youth has a GED we have no possible RTC placement. Often times individuals in this age group are recommended for the TAY program which does not provide the level of supervision needed for some.

	For children and youth in need of pre-placement assessment and diagnostic evaluation		There do not appear to be any concerns in this area for this population.

Reason #	Reasons Additional Services Are Needed
1	The services are simply not available
2	There exists an extraordinarily long waiting list for these services
3	Patients have to travel for very long distances to receive these services which creates a tremendous hardship on family and others wishing to be involved in treatment
4	The services that are available are not effective, or I have concerns about the safety of patients receiving care in those available treatment locations
5	Other:

Additional comments (i.e., any clarification, detail, any specific staffing types or ratios required, programming required, etc.)
Overall, the cases that we have the most difficulty with are those of traumatized females. There does not appear to be a RTC placement that focuses primarily on trauma for females 13-21. Additionally, once a youth turns 18 it is nearly impossible to find a RTC placement even if the recommendations state that the youth needs this level of placement. Often times these individuals are placed in juvenile detention centers or in environments that are unable to provide them with the services that they need.

5	Other:

Additional comments (i.e., any clarification, detail, any specific staffing types or ratios required, programming required, etc.)
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Above data is based solely on the CSA's experience with placements of County youth into Maryland Medicaid facilities (does not include data from DHR or DJS). Programming needs to be able to address issues associated with adoption and attachment disorders and handle youth who have violent and/or aggressive behaviors. Sound discharge planning and ongoing family engagement are key to ensuring successful transition back into the community. Staff will need to have knowledge of available community based resources and establish working relationships with those providers.
